

Bless Them All... but I'll Stay Here Laughing

Spock & Kirk on the Bridge of Wonder World

Kirk: I saw a miracle in the clouds.

Spock: I saw condensation.

Kirk: See? Synergy already.

Spock: Captain, your interpretive process lacks scientific rigor.
Kirk: Spock, it lacks seriousness — that's the feature.

I asked the universe for signs.
It sent me lint.

Spock: The probability of spiritual significance is minimal.

Kirk: Perfect. I hate pressure.

Some spirits appear in the clouds.
Mine shows up in the laundry pile.

Spock: Captain, I believe the phenomenon requires folding.
Kirk: Never fold the mysteries of the universe.

I chase good lighting.

Spock: Conclusion?

Kirk: No need.

No conclusions were reached on the bridge today.
Laughter remains the universal translator.
